

THE MISSIONS

THE MISSIONS - The Novels & Short Stories

Listed in Publication order

Fleming, Ian

Casino Royale (1953) – James Bond, agent 007 of the British Secret Service is assigned the job of beating the man known as Le Chiffre, an known agent of the Soviet assassination bureau SMERSH, in a high stakes card game at a French casino. The service hopes that Le Chiffre's gambling debts, financed with SMERSH money, will lead the Soviets to assassinate him. For the mission Bond is accompanied by the beautiful Vesper Lynd, and the two become lovers, but Bond is unaware that she is a Russian double agent under orders to make sure that Bond doesn't escape le Chiffre's clutches.

Live And Let Die (1954) - Bond is sent to investigate "Mr. Big", an underworld voodoo leader who is suspected by M of financing Soviet spy operations in America. During the investigation Bond's friend, CIA gent Felix Leiter is captured and fed to a shark leaving him permanently maimed. Bond absconds with Mr. Big's fortune teller, Solitaire, and the two are recaptured in Jamacia and are about to be keel-hauled when Mr. Big's boat explodes thanks to a limpet mine that Bond had planted earlier.

Moonraker (1955) - Bond proves that multi-millionaire industrialist Hugo Drax is a card cheat. To try and find out why he gets himself seconded to Drax's Moonraker missile project being built to defend the UK against its Cold War enemies. Bond uncovers the truth that Drax is an ex-Nazi and that he plans to use the missile to destroy London.

Diamonds Are Forever (1956) - Bond is tasked with infiltrating a smuggling ring, which is running diamonds from African mines to the United States. Bond's job is to travel down the "pipeline" as far as he can and find out who is behind it all. Under the name of Peter Franks, he meets a mysterious "go-between" named Tiffany Case, with whom he falls in love. Bond discovers that the smuggling ring is operated by a ruthless American gang called "The Spangled Mob", and the pipeline ends in Las Vegas at a ghost town named "Spectreville".

From Russia With Love (1957) - SMERSH lays a trap for Bond by setting pretty young cipher clerk, Corporal Tatiana Romanova, to pretend to defect from her post in Istanbul, claiming to have fallen in love with Bond after a glimpse from his file photograph. As an added incentive, Tatiana will provide the British agent with a Spektor decoder. As Bond and Tatiana flee on the Orient Express train Bond becomes engaged in a brutal fight to the death with SMERSH assassin Grant.

Dr No (1958) - Bond is sent to Jamaica to investigate the disappearance of Strangways, the head of a station in Kingston. Strangways had been investigating the activities of a Dr. No. Bond discovers that Dr. No, who ostensibly operates a business harvesting and exporting guano, is in fact working with the Russians to sabotage nearby American missile tests.

Goldfinger (1959) – Bond encounters an old friend who hires him to confirm that he is being cheated at cards by a man called Auric Goldfinger. Later Goldfinger's name comes up in relation to a possible case of gold smuggling. Bond follows Goldfinger and eventually finds himself recruited into Goldfinger's circle where he is included in Goldfinger's plans to rob Fort Knox.

From A View To A Kill (1959) (short) - While taking a break in Paris Bond is sent to investigate the murder of an army dispatch-rider who was carrying intelligence documents. To unravel the mystery Bond disguises himself as a dispatch-rider and follows the same journey as the previous rider. The assassin attempts to kill Bond, however, Bond is ready and ends up killing the assassin, and uncovering his base of operations hidden in an old gypsy encampment.

Quantum Of Solace (1959) (short) – While at a boring dinner party one of Bond's remarks prompts his host to tell an intriguing tale of a doomed relationship. Bond is later surprised to learn that one of the participants in the story was one of the dinner guests.

The Hildebrand Rarity (1960) (short) - While vacationing in the Seychelles islands with Bond is introduced to objectionable and sadistic millionaire Milton Krest, who is in search of a rare fish. Krest invites Bond to join him and his young wife Elizabeth in the hunt for the fish. A hunt that ultimately proves fatal for Krest.

For Your Eyes Only (1960) (short) – M gives Bond a voluntary assignment to extract revenge of a Cuban hitman who has murdered friends of his. When Bond tracks the hitman to his hideout he finds out that the murdered couple's daughter has got there first with her own plans for vengeance.

Risico (1960) (short) - Bond is sent by M to investigate a drug smuggling operation based out of Italy. The investigation places Bond in the middle of a feud between two former patriots, Kristatos and Columbo and is forced to pick sides.

Thunderball (1961) – While at the Shrubland's health clinic Bond stumbles onto events linked to SPECTRE's plans to steal two nuclear devices and hold NATO to ransom. Bond is sent to the Bahamas where he encounters SPECTRE agent Emil Largo, and traces the stolen bombs.

The Living Daylights (1962) (short) - Bond is assigned as a sniper to cover the escape of a Russian defector known only as “272.” MI6 has reports that a KGB assassin known as “Trigger” has been ordered to kill “272.” Bond is surprised to discover that “Trigger” is a beautiful woman. Instead of killing her Bond shoots the butt of her rifle to stop her firing. While “272” escapes unharmed the mission is deemed a failure.

The Spy Who Loved Me (1962) - Bond is sent to Canada to assist in the capture of a suspected SPECTRE agent. On completion of that mission while en-route to Washington DC his car suffers a blow out and he finds himself at the Dreamy Pines Motor Lodge, where he interrupts a dangerous insurance scam in progress and rescues Vivienne Michel from two mob enforcers.

On Her Majesty's Secret Service (1963) – After Bond saves the life of Contessa Teresa (Tracy) di Vincenzo her father, Marc-Ange Drace, the head of the Union Corse criminal organization offers Bond a million dollars to marry her. Bond refuses but asks Draco to help him find Blofeld, the head of SPECTRE. Information leads Bond to Blofeld’s clinic in the alps where he is brainwashing a selection of British girls to unconsciously launch a biological weapons attack on British food and wildlife stocks on their return to the UK. Despite Bond’s best efforts Blofeld escapes, but his clinic is destroyed and his biological warfare plans thwarted. A short while later Bond and Tracy marry, but as they drive away from their wedding they are attacked in a drive by shooting by Blofeld and Tracy is killed.

007 In New York (1963) (short) - Bond is sent by M to New York to warn an ex-Secret Service field officer that her boyfriend has been discovered to be a KGB agent. (007NYss)

Property Of A Lady (1963) (short) - During an auction at Sotheby's Bond helps uncover the identity of the KGB's Resident Director in the UK.

You Only Live Twice (1964) – Bond is sent to Japan to try and convince the head of the Japanese secret service, Tiger Tanaka, to share information he has about the Soviet Union. Tiger and Bond form a deep friendship and Tiger agrees to Bond’s request, if Bond will carry out one task. Kill a Dr. Shatterhand, who is operating a politically embarrassing ‘Garden of Death’ where people go to commit suicide. Bond is amazed to discover that Shatterhand is in fact Blofeld and is happy to set out on his own revenge. Bond infiltrates Blofeld’s castle. Eventually facing Blofeld in a sword duel Bond kills his nemesis, but as he escapes he suffers a head injury that leaves him with no memories. Eventually Bond comes across a mention of Vladivostok in a paper and it starts to spark memories of his past life. A life he sets off to rediscover.

Octopussy (1965) (short) - Bond undertakes a personal mission to Jamaica to confront a Major Dexter Smythe, who Bond has discovered murdered his childhood ski-instructor at the war's end while stealing a cache of Nazi gold.

The Man With The Golden Gun (1965) - A year after his disappearance James Bond reappears in London and tries to assassinate M. The assassination plot is foiled and it is revealed that Bond was brain washed by the KGB after he traveled to Vladivostok to recover his memory. Once deprogrammed M sends Bond on an apparent suicide mission to take out the renowned Cuban backed gunman Francisco Scaramanga, also known as The Man With The Golden Gun. Bond locates Scaramanga in Jamaica and manages to get himself hired as a minder/personal assistant. Eventually Bond's cover is blown and Scaramanga tries to kill him. After a gun battle on a train, the two face off in a swamp. Bond eventually kills Scaramanga but, once again, is severely wounded.

Amis, Kingsley

Colonel Sun (1968) - After M is kidnapped from his home, Bond sets out to find him. Bond uncovers a plot by Chinese agent Colonel Sun to attack a Soviet hosted peace conference and place M's body at the site to implicate the British. Working with Ariadne Alexandrou, a Greek communist Soviet agent, Bond rescues M and thwarts Colonel Sun's plans.

Pearson, John

James Bond: The Authorized Biography of 007 (1973) - Ian Fleming's biographer discovers that Fleming's books were based on a real life James Bond, and sets off to track down the man behind the myth. With the help of MI6 he finds the real Bond on vacation in Bermuda awaiting a new assignment and convinces him to share his life story.

Gardner, John

License Renewed (1981) - After a reorganization M manages to retain Bond as his troubleshooter and sends him to investigate Dr. Anton Murick, Bond acting a mercenary gets taken on by Murick. Bond discovers that Murick, thwarted in his plans to develop a special type of power plant, plans to hijack six nuclear power plants around the world and hold the worlds to ransom to fund his dream power plant.

For Special Services (1982) - Bond teams up with CIA agent Cedar Leiter (daughter of Felix Leiter) after its discovered that SPECTRE is back in action and intends to take over NORAD to control the USA satellite system.

Icebreaker (1983) - Bond is reluctantly teamed with agents from the CIA, MOSSAD and the KGB to stop the NSAA (National Socialist action Group) who seem determined to wipe out all communists and bring back the Nazi regime under the control of Count Konrad von Glöda, under many double and triple crosses the KGB are hoping to capture Bond.

Role of Honor (1984) - To enable Bond to infiltrate an organization that is pulling off outrageous robberies he resigns under murky circumstances from the service after his uncle leaves him a substantial legacy. Bond discovers the robberies were test runs for software that will be used by Ramil Tahani now head of SPECTRE to access the Presidents of the US access codes to deactivate all the nuclear weapons in the USA leaving Russia with full nuclear capabilities.

Nobody Lives Forever (1986) - There is a competition on to deliver Bond's head on a silver platter and win ten million Swiss francs set up by Ramil Tahani who Bond tangled with in Role of Honor, he is dying and his last wish is Bonds head.

No Deals, Mr. Bond (1987) - Bond is called in to investigate the deaths of two female agents he had rescued from Russia many years ago. They were part of a honey trap mission that fell apart when one was spotted. Now General Chernov is eliminating all the members of the team. Bond is off the clock on this mission, he is the main target of the KGB to capture and kill.

Scorpius (1988) - After the assassinations by human bombs of politicians Bond is sent to investigate the Meek Ones, run by Father Valentine/Scorpius. He mind washes people to follow his orders blindly, his aim to cause political chaos and sell his creations to the highest bidders.

Win, Lose or Die (1989) - Bond is returns to active duty as a Captain in the Royal Navy to help foil a plan by BAST (Brotherhood of Anarchy and Secret Terror) to kidnap and hold the leaders of Russia, the United Kingdom and the USA to ransom.

License To Kill (1989) – Movie novelization – see movie listing for plot summary.

Brokenclaw (1990) - Bond and a Chinese agent, Chi-Chi are sent in undercover to stop the sale of LORDS and LORDS DAY (submarine tracking and masking) to the Chinese by Lee Brokenclaw. Brokenclaw is part American Indian and he was quietly resettling tribes to build himself a very loyal army.

The Man From Barbarossa (1991) - After the kidnapping of an old man in the USA Bond and a Mossad agent, Pete Natkwski, are sent in to Russia to impersonate members of The Scales of Justice, thought to be a terrorist group trying to force the Russian government to the embarrassment of holding a war crimes trial. Bond discovers it's a front by a Russian General to cover his tracks to take out the President and take over Russia to bring it back to the old ways.

Death Is Forever (1992) - Bond is brought in to investigate the deaths of members of Cabal, a spy ring that disbanded themselves when the Berlin wall came down. Bond discovers the deaths are revenge by Wolfgang Weisen, ex-deputy at the East German Foreign Intelligence Agency. It also covers his main aim, which is to kill all the heads of government as they take the inaugural train journey through the Eurotunnel allowing him and his team to take over Europe and bring it under the rule of the old East German regime.

Never Send Flowers (1993) - After four seemingly unrelated murders, one of them being a SIS agent Bond is sent to investigate David Dragonpol, a famous retired actor, who has been under surveillance by several countries. Bond teams up with a Swiss agent, Frederica Von Grusse. Bond discovers that David Dragonpol is insane and enjoys planning and executing the murders of random, but mostly famous, people. The team race against time to stop him assassinating Princess Diana and her two sons at Euro Disney.

Seafire (1994) - After MI5 is reorganized Bond now runs a department that reports to a committee and can act for any part of the government. M, now part of the committee, is contacted by the accountant of Sir Maxwell Tarn, an enormously rich business man to say he has proof that Sir Maxwell is an arms dealer. Bond and Flicka are sent after Sir Maxwell and discover his plans to create an incident he helps fix to enable him to use his readopted German citizenship to become the Chancellor of Germany and bring back the Nazi regime.

GoldenEye (1995) - Movie novelization – see movie listing for plot summary.

Cold Fall (aka COLD) (1996) - a two part story starts in 1990 with the explosion of a plane as it lands at Dulles airport, Bond is sent to investigate and bumps into Principessa Suki Tempesta, shortly after it looks like she has been killed by a car bomb, introducing Bond and M to the Tempestas as criminals and their work with COLD to take over the USA, going back to the old days of an "eye for an eye", Bond gets involved with trying to lure them to the USA from Italy but M gets kidnapped instead, Bond rescues him and their involvement with COLD ends until 1994 when Bond is contacted by an old friend Breatiche di Rossa that she needs his help, between them and with the help of the FBI and the Italian forces they stop COLD.

Benson, Raymond

Blast From The Past (1997) (short) -A note from his son, James Suzuki, brings Bond to New York where he faces tragedy and falls into the hands of an old enemy.

Zero Minus Ten (1997) - Bond is sent to Hong Kong to investigate a series of mysterious deaths linked to a Hong Kong based company that is owned by an old British family. His investigations uncover a plot by the deranged CEO, Guy Thackery, to explode a nuclear device in Hong Kong harbor to derail the hand over of the former British colony to the Chinese.

Tomorrow Never Dies (1997) - Movie novelization – see movie listing for plot summary.

The Facts of Death (1998) - Bond is assigned to investigate the apparent murder of the UK's Goodwill Ambassador, Alfred Hutchinson a delicate assignment due to Hutchinson being in an intimate relationship with M. Bond's investigations link Hutchinson to an organization known as the Decada, that has released a bio-chemical weapon and is also bent of causing a war between Greece and Turkey.

Midsummer Night's Doom (1999) (short) - Bond is sent undercover to a party at the Playboy Mansion with orders to uncover a spy who is buying leaked military secrets.

High Time To Kill (1999) - After a tourist plane carrying a US Senator and a British MP crashes into the higher slopes of Kangchenjunga, the third highest mountain in the world, a government funded recovery mission is set up to climb the mountain. Bond is assigned to the climb team, whose real mission is to enable him to recover a microdot of military secrets, stolen by the criminal organization known as The Union, that was also on the flight.

Live At Five (1999) (short) - Bond provides the distraction for a Russian Olympic skater to defect, and in the process catches the eye of a local TV reporter.

The World Is Not Enough (1999) - Movie novelization – see movie listing for plot summary.

Double Shot (2000) - The Union vows revenge on James Bond and sets out to destroy him and his reputation. They frame him for a series of murders, then replace him with a double so it will appear that Bond has gone rogue, joined The Union, all leading up to "Bond" assassinating the British and Spanish Prime Ministers, thereby embarrassing the British Secret Service and destroying Bond's life and career. Bond eventually works out what is happening, and replaces his own double and turns the tables on The Union.

Never Dream Of Dying (2001) - Bond is assigned to work with the French RAID organization and his old friend Mathis on an attack on suspected Union operatives at a French movie studio. The set-up is a trap and the attack is a failure. Later several incidents point to an increase in Union activity that connect to the studios owner Leon Essinger. Bond is sent to investigate and falls for Essinger's estranged wife Tylyn Mignonne. Events lead to Corsica and a show down for Bond with Le Gerant, head of The Union.

The Man With The Red Tattoo (2002) - Bond is sent to Japan at the personal request of the British Prime Minister to provide security for a planned G8 Summit in the country. While in Japan he is asked to investigate the mysterious deaths of a Japanese family headed by a Scottish businessman. This leads him to uncover a plot by terrorist Goro Yoshida to attack the G8 Summit with weaponized mosquitoes aiming to kill several heads of state. Bond is also reunited with his old friend Tiger Tanaka who presents him with a gold katana samurai sword, with which Bond faces Yoshida in a final duel. Following his defeat by Bond, Yoshida commits ritual suicide. (MWRTn)

Die Another Day (2002) - Movie novelization – see movie listing for plot summary.

Faulks, Sebastian

Devil May Care (2008) - M is concerned of reports of increasing drugs traffic coming in from France that he believes is connected to the pharmaceutical industrialist Dr. Julius Gorner. Bond eventually follows Gorner to Persia where he uncovers a plot to launch an attack on Russia and have the UK blamed for it, hoping that Russia will retaliate with an attack against the British.

Deaver, Jeffery

Carte Blanche (2011) - A modern contemporary Bond's investigations into something code named "Incident Twenty" lead him to suspect the involvement of Severan Hydt, a waste-disposal magnate. In South Africa Bond uncovers that Hydt has been engaged to explode a bomb on a British University campus, and is also involved in a fraudulent plot to use food aid to spark a civil war in Sudan.

Boyd, William

SOLO (2013) - Shortly after his forty-fifth birthday, Bond is assigned by M to protect British interests in the civil war raging in the African country of Zanzarim by eliminating the rebel military leader. The military leader appears to die of natural causes before Bond can intervene. However he figures out a way to undermine the rebel army's morale and effectively stops the war, but is gravely wounded in the process. Believing he has been betrayed and that his mission was part of a larger conspiracy Bond uses his recuperation time to "go solo" on a mission to uncover the truth.

YOUNG BOND

Mascott, R.D.

003 1/2 The Adventures of James Bond Jr. (1967) - While home on vacation from boarding school, young James Bond, the namesake nephew of the famous secret agent, discovers that the local manor house is being used as a hideout by a gang of bullion thieves.

Higson, Charlie

Silverfin (2005) - Bond starts at Eton and feels out of his depth. During his Easter holiday he stays with his aunt and uncle in Scotland and discovers that a fellow Etonian's father owns the Castle close his uncle's house. The Castle has been completely renovated and no local people are employed there plus a local boy has gone missing. Bond decides to investigate along with the boy's cousin. They discover that the castle is being used by Lord Hellebore to develop a serum to create superhuman soldiers. They have been experimenting on pigs and eels but need human subjects to test. Bond is captured and injected with the serum, which makes him strong and helps him destroy the lab and escape. He is very sick after and nearly dies.

Blood Fever (2006) - As Bond's Aunt is away for the summer he joins a school trip to Sardinia with plans to stay with his Uncle who has a villa on the island. At Eton Bond has heard odd things regarding the Millenaria. His uncles villa is robbed of all its paintings while Bond is there but his uncle is absent at a carnival held by Count Ugo, Bond travels there to tell his uncle about the robbery and discovers that the Count has been organizing robberies to restart the Millenaria with him as their leader and to decorate his Palazzo, he is broke and stops paying the men stealing for him causing problems. One decides to demolish the dam above the palazzo, which destroys the house. Bond is involved in rescuing the sister of a schoolmate who was kidnapped when pirates robbed and killed her father.

Double Or Die (2007) - Bond gets involved in solving a cryptic letter from an Eton tutor. The Russians have kidnapped him to create one of the first computers to use for codes and code breaking. Bond discovers the truth and rescues the tutor and ruins the machine.

Hurricane Gold (2007) - While Bond is traveling with his aunt in Mexico recovering from injuries sustained in his last adventure a storm disrupts many plans. Bond's aunt flies off to beat the storm leaving Bond with the family of a friend. The friend's house is burgled for Naval plans supposedly in the safe. In the absence of the father the gang decide kidnap his children, Bond tries to stop them and ends up impersonating a young Mexican thief so stay close to the children while the gang try to make their way to civilization. The lead from the gang escapes to an Island for thieves and Bond and Precious follow her trying to retrieve the plans and have to be successful in negotiating deadly traps to be allowed to leave, they succeed and leave with the plans.

A Hard Man To Kill (2009) (short) - Bond and his Aunt Charmain are traveling home on the French passenger ship Colombie, which is also carrying Caiboche, a violent Frenchman, back to France for trial. Part of the crew and passengers are Caiboche's men and have a plan to free him but Bond overhears and stops them with the help of Wilder Lawless and Rene Mathis, a young officer guarding Caiboche. Caiboche escapes over the ship and looks to be rescued by the submarine sent to pick him up.

By Royal Command (2008) - While Bond is settling back in with his school friends on a skiing trip he visits a friend at the hospital and blunders into a room where two men are wrapped in bandages. One is Dr. Perseus Friend from the Silverfin Project. Friend is impersonating an Austrian Count while planning the assassination of King George for the Nazis while making it look like a Communist plot, he requests that Bond is made to look like a traitor and die in the process. Bond stops the plot and finds his tutor is a spy who asks him to work with him.

Cole, Steven

Shoot To Kill (2014) - Anton Kostler is trying to take over the world with blackmail and torture to control the movies shown at all movie theaters then he will move onto politicians. Desperate to regain control of a reel of film showing the torture and killings his men carried out in Europe, it was stolen by Dan Sloman a pupil at Dartington Hall, a school where James Bond will spend the summer.

MONEYPENNY DIARIES

Westbrook, Kate

Moneypenny Diaries (2005) - Kate, a lecturer at Cambridge, is mailed her aunts (Jane Vivian Moneypenny) diaries ten years after her death, they came from 3 different solicitors offices. Kate initially decides not to publish them as they cover the whole of her life but decides if she can verify the details she will publish them. She starts with 1962 covering the Cuban missile crisis. In 1962 Ms. Moneypenny was M's secretary and saw everything going on in MI6 cross her desk. She is approached by unnamed, but probably East German or Russian, representatives offering her information on what happened to her father after he was captured by the Germans in WWII in return for information, Moneypenny initially doesn't tell anyone at work even though this contravenes the contract she signed, as well as keeping the diary, eventually she tells Bill, M's chief of staff and they work together with Dorothy Field as the information they spies are giving her infer they have a leak. As this is going on Moneypenny is worried about Bond as he recovers from the death of his wife Tracy, she flies out and retrieves him from a mission after he disappears. After heading to Miami with M to update the Americans on their intel regarding the Cubans she ends up heading to Cuba to rescue Bond, later they return to Cuba to take photos of the missiles for the Americans. During the year Moneypenny has fallen in love with an architect who she thinks might be linked to her blackmail, it turns out he is an MI6 agent who saves her from her blackmailers "Colonel Boris" when she refuses to give them any information.

For Your Eyes Only, James (2006) (short) - Moneypenny is ordered by M to accompany Bond on his annual trip to Royale-Les-Eaux and act as his alibi, Bond's mission is to eliminate an MI6 Afghan agent about to defect to the KGB. Bond and Moneypenny set up an elaborate scene using gadgets from Q so that no one can prove Bond was absent from their room, he arrives back just in time.

Secret Servant (2006) - Kate Westbrook is determined to publish her aunts diaries even after she is fired from her job, she continues to verify her aunts details by meeting with Bill Tanner in England, traveling to Colditz and Russia and finally moving to Kenya where she meets Miles Pitman. The second installment to be published is January 1963 to April 1964. MI6 is still reeling with the uncovering of spies in Kim Philby and Prenderghast and 007's possible death. Moneypenny continues to see the architect and they both realize they are now marked for death by the Russian; he goes undercover to solve the problem but is killed in East Berlin. 007 returns dramatically by attempting to assassinate M in his office after being brainwashed by the Russians. He is rehabilitated and sent off after Scaramanga. M requests that Moneypenny become friends with Eleanor Philby and when she requests help in Russia Moneypenny heads to Moscow to see how she can help, "Colonel Boris" discovers who she really is and sets her up by Kim Philby acting like he wishes to leave Russia, the main plan being Boris captures Moneypenny and convinces her to take him to England as a defector. Bill Tanner helps Moneypenny escape Russia and they take Boris to London where after interrogation they swap him with an MI6 agent. Moneypenny finally finds out what happened to her father during WWII.

Moneypenny's First Date With Bond (2006) (short) - Moneypenny's first morning as M's private secretary leads to her calling James Bond to M's office where he is promoted to the OO Section. Bond invites Moneypenny out to dinner at Scott's and plies her with champagne and oysters. They have a lovely evening and Bond leaves her with a kiss on the cheek. Later in the week in the Powder Vine she hears a few of the typists comparing dates with Bond. Moneypenny lets Bond know she isn't jealous just picky.

Final Fling (2008) - Kate Westbrook continues to research her aunts diaries. Things are going wrong at the office, a new deputy chief has been appointed from the Foreign Office and a representative has been sent from the Ministers Office to oversee the Office after the Prenderghast and Philby defections. M is adamant there is still a mole in the office. Moneypenny is sent to Jamaica to clear the clerical backlog as there is still no section chief. She feels like she is being sidelined. 009 disappears in Vienna after a failed contact with a possible KGB defector, when news of his being found and deathly ill Moneypenny joins Bond in flying back, M is not happy to see her and refuses to take her back as his private secretary. She works for the new deputy chief who she hates and decides to resign after 009's death and 007 being fired. She discovers he was fired so he could work with M from the outside and she agrees to join them and work for the representative from the Ministers Office, he is cleverer than they think and uncovers Moneypenny meeting Bond when they had all been told he was off limits. Moneypenny explains what they were doing and Bond is reinstated but M is ousted and replaced by Sir Jack Gavascon, Moneypenny accepts his offer to be his private secretary. Kate Westbrook is still trying to uncover the mole and also why her aunt died sailing when she was an excellent sailor and the sea was calm. She discovers that her aunt had discovered who the mole was after receiving a dossier from M on his death, she summons the mole to North Uist and takes him sailing, both their bodies are washed up on the beach the next morning. Kate has become close to Ferdy McIntyre from the SIS and they decide, now she has found out what she needed to know, that they will go to Kenya.

THE MISSIONS - The Movies & TV

LIVE ACTION

Casino Royale (TV - 1954) - Combined Intelligence agent James Bond is assigned the task of beating the Soviet agent known as Le Chiffre at baccarat. Complicating matters is that Le Chiffre's current girlfriend is Bond's old flame, Valerie Mathis, who is secretly an agent of French Intelligence. After he is defeated le Chiffre confronts Mathis and Bond in Bond's hotel room, where Bond is tortured by Le Chiffre's bodyguards. Bond manages to escape and in the ensuing struggle shots and kills Le Chiffre.

Dr. No. (1962) – British secret service agent, James Bond 007 is sent to Jamaica to investigate the disappearance of station chief John Strangways and his secretary. Various clues lead Bond to suspect the involvement of the mysterious Dr. No who operates from the nearby island of Crab Key and seems to govern through a cult of fear. On the island Bond meets shell diver Honey Rider. The two are captured and Bond encounters Dr. No and learns he is an agent of SPECTRE using the island as cover to run a high-tech operation to interfere with American rocket launches. Bond escapes and in a hand to hand battle kills Dr. No and sets off a chain reaction that destroys the base.

From Russia With Love (1963) – SPECTRE devise a plan to revenge themselves against Bond for the death of Dr. No while simultaneously setting the British and Russian Secret Services against each other. Using the fact that the defection of senior Russian officer Rosa Klebb to SPECTRE has been kept a secret, they recruit an attractive Russian cipher clerk, Tatania Romanov, to suggest that she will defect to the British and bring a Lektor decoder with her; but only if Bond goes to Turkey to personally help her defect. Knowing it's a trap, Bond works with Kerim Bey, head of Station T, Turkey, to organize the defection. On the Orient Express he comes face to face with SPECTRE assassin, Red Grant and the two are involved in a brutal fight, which Bond eventually wins. Believing they are safe Bond and Titania journey to Venice only to finally be confronted by Klebb.

Goldfinger (1964) – While recuperating in Miami, Bond is asked to observe the activities of Auric Goldfinger, and uncovers the fact that he is a cheat. Goldfinger kills his former assistant in Bond's bedroom by covering her all over with gold paint. Back in the UK Goldfinger's name comes up in association with a possible gold smuggling operation. Bond maneuvers himself to cross paths with Goldfinger and then trails him to Switzerland where he uncovers the gold smuggling process and a connection between Goldfinger and the Chinese. After being captured Bond is taken to Goldfinger's property in the United States, where he learns of Goldfinger's plans to detonate a nuclear device in the Fort Knox gold depository thereby destroying the US economy and tripling the value of his own gold holdings. With the help of Goldfinger's personal pilot, Pussy Galore, Bond smuggles out a message to the CIA and manages to foil the plot.

James Bond on Holiday (TV - 1964) - After assignments in Ankara and Casablanca, Bond decides to use some of his six week's paid vacation and checks into a hotel for a short holiday. After leaving the casino he decides to settle down for a drink on the terrace where he is surprised to find his Soviet nemesis, the beautiful spy, Sonia Serakova who also claims to be on holiday. The two trade barbs and mutual distrust until they both receive a call back to action.

Thunderball (1965) – After SPECTRE hijack an military flight carrying atomic bombs, Bond realizes that strange activity he witnessed while attending the Shrublands Health Clinic may be connected to the case. He follows a lead to Bahamas where he encounters Emil Largo who Bond is convinced is a member of SPECTRE. Working with the CIA Bond finds the missing plane, but without the bombs onboard. Infiltrating Largo's team of divers, Bond locates the bombs and arranges for an assault team to intercept Largo when he moves the bombs.

You Only Live Twice (1967) – American and Russian space flights are being snatched from orbit, bringing the two super-powers to the brink of war. The British believe that the mysterious enemy spacecraft is being launched from Japan and Bond is sent to investigate. Working with the Japanese secret service, Bond uncovers a SPECTRE base hidden in a volcano. Bond also comes face to face with Blofeld, the head of SPECTRE for the first time. In a final attack on the base by Japanese secret service ninjas Blofeld escapes, but the base is destroyed saving the space program.

Casino Royale (1967) – A new powerful SMERSH is eliminating agents, forcing the heads of all the world's security agencies to come together to ask the legendary Sir James Bond to come out of retirement to deal with the threat. In order to confuse the enemy Sir James, declares that all field agents should use the code name James Bond. He also persuades ex-agent and now millionaire businesswoman Vesper Lynd to recruit baccarat expert Evelyn Tremble to take on SMERSH agent Le Chiffre at Casino Royale in an effort to undermine SMERSH operations. Lynd is kidnapped by Le Chiffre and SMERSH, the first of several kidnappings that brings Sir James and other Bond agents into a climatic battle during which the head of SMERSH, known as Doctor Noah, is revealed to be Bond's ineffectual nephew, Jimmy Bond. Once his secret is revealed Jimmy Bond is tricked into swallowing an "atomic pill" that eventually goes off killing everyone in the base and in the Casino.

On Her Majesty's Secret Service (1969) – After saving the life of the Contessa di Vicenzo, Bond uses the connections of her father, Marc Ange-Draco, Head of the Union Corse crime syndicate, to trace Blofeld to a research institute in the Swiss Alps. After infiltrating the institute Bond discovers that Blofeld is brainwashing his patients to deliver biological weapons. Bond escapes with the help of Tracy di Vicenzo, who he proposes to, but she is captured by Blofeld and held at the institute. Bond and Draco organize an attack on the institute during which they rescue Tracy, but after a chase the injured Blofeld escapes. Bond and Tracy are married, but she is murdered on their wedding day in a drive-by shooting by Blofeld and his assistant Irma Blunt.

Diamonds Are Forever (1971) – Desperate for revenge against Blofeld, Bond follows various clues and leads around the world until he comes face to face with his nemesis who has changed his appearance and is preparing a series of duplicates. Bond confronts and kills who he believes to be the real Blofeld. Returning to the service Bond is assigned to investigate a case of diamond smuggling by following the smugglers pipeline. His guide along the pipeline, that leads to Las Vegas, is attractive smuggler Tiffany Case. In Vegas they discover that the diamonds are being used to build a satellite laser weapon designed to destroy targets on the ground. Heading the project is Blofeld, under the cover of the organization owned by reclusive billionaire Willard Whyte. Bond rescues Whyte and the two attack Blofeld's command center on an oil-rig off the coast of California. Although apparently trapped on the burning rig, Blofeld's fate is uncertain.

Live and Let Die (1973) – After three agents are killed within the space of twenty-four hours, Bond is assigned to investigate. Starting off in New York various clues lead him to the island nation of San Monique, and the connection between its Prime Minister and New York drug dealer Mr. Big. On the island Bond seduces Kanaga's soothsayer Solitaire and discovers acres of poppy fields, plus uncovering the fact that Kananga and Mr. Big are in fact the same person. After being captured and escaping Bond returns to the island, rescues Solitaire, destroys the poppy fields, and kills Kananga.

The Man With the Golden Gun (1974) - When the Secret Service receives a golden bullet engraved with Bond's 007 number, M pulls him off the case he is currently working on, the disappearance of a solar energy scientist. The golden bullet is the known calling card of the assassin Scaramanga, and Bond sets out to track him down. He traces Scramanaga to Hong Kong where he is surprised to find out that the assassin's real target was the missing solar scientist. After Scaramanga escapes Bond finds out that the bullet was sent by Scaramang's aide, Miss Anders, who wants Bond to kill him. The trail eventually leads to Scaramanga's private island where he and Bond engage in a duel.

The Spy Who Loved Me (1977) – The disappearance of British and Soviet nuclear submarines results in Bond being assigned to work alongside KGB agent Major Anya Amasova to resolve the case. They discover that the man responsible is marine tycoon Karl Stromberg who wants to destroy the surface world and restart civilization under the sea. Bond teams up with the crews of the captured submarines to thwart Stromberg's plans and destroy his ocean going headquarters.

Moonraker (1979) – After a space shuttle on loan to the British government is stolen, Bond's investigations brings him into the circle of the shuttle manufacturer Hugo Drax. Bond discovers that Drax is manufacturing a strain of nerve gas with which he plans to cleanse the earth and repopulate it with a race of perfect humans who will be protected in an orbital space station. Bond along shuttle pilot and CIA agent Dr. Holly Goodhead, blast off to the space station and disable its cloaking system allowing it to be attacked by US space marines. During the battle, Bond kills Drax and the space station is destroyed.

For Your Eyes Only (1981) – When marine archaeologist Sir Timothy Havelock and his wife are murdered trying to recover a lost submarine tracking system from deep waters near Greece, their daughter vows revenge. Her path crosses that of Bond who has been tasked with finding out who is behind the attack. Leads lead to Greek businessman and patriot Kristatos who tells Bond that the attack is the work of men working for the Greek smuggler, Columbo. In fact it is the other way around and Columbo wins Bond's trust and includes him in an attack on Kristatos's warehouse where Bond faces discovers diving equipment. He and Melina Havelock race to recover the sunken tracking device but are intercepted and captured by Kristatos. With Columbo's help Bond leads a small team to Kristatos's mountain top retreat where he destroys the device so that it can't be handed over to the KGB.

Octopussy (1983) – The murder of 009 leads uncovers a conspiracy between warmongering Russian General Orlov and Afghan prince Kamal Khan to use proceeds from stolen Russian Imperial crown jewels to fund a possible war. Khan has been using the travelling circus of the mysterious woman known only as Octopussy to smuggle the jewels around Europe, but she is unaware of his and Orlov's plans to use the circus to smuggle an atomic bomb onto an American airforce base in Germany hoping that its detonation will cause the German government to make the US forces leave thereby leaving the border undefended. Bond discovers the plot and manages to defuse the device with seconds to spare. The plot foiled he and Octopussy join forces in an attack on Kamal's palace.

Never Say Never Again (1983) – After a poor performance during a training exercise, Bond is sent to a health clinic. While there he witnesses strange behavior centered around one of the private patients. The patient is an US Air Force pilot who has been surgically altered with a false retina scan to allow him to arm two nuclear cruise missiles. The missiles are stolen mid flight by SPECTRE, and Bond is tasked with tracking them down. He crosses paths with the megalomaniacal Maximilian Largo who is planning to explode one of the warheads under an oilfield. With the aide of Largo's mistress, Domino, Bond manages to kill Largo and stop SPECTRE's plan from succeeding.

A View to a Kill (1985) - After recovering a stolen microchip from Russian hands, Bond's investigations lead him to industrialist Max Zorin, and ex-KGB sleeper agent gone rogue. Zorin plans to destroy Silicon Valley thereby placing himself as the monopoly supplier of micro-chips. Bond manages to stop Zorin's plan and eventually kills Zorin after a climatic battle on top of the Golden Gate bridge.

The Living Daylights (1987) – Bond is tricked into helping with the staged defection of KGB office General Koskov. It turns out that Koskov is actually in league with arms dealer, Brad Whitaker and the two are running a scheme to use diamonds stolen from the KGB to purchase drugs. When they try and trick Bond again, this time into assassinating the head of the KGB, their plan starts to come unraveled culminating in Bond destroying the drug shipment, and killing Whitaker, while Koskov is taken into custody by his former KGB colleagues.

Licence to Kill (1989) – When Felix Leiter is maimed, and his new wife killed, by drug lord Franz Sanchez, Bond goes on a mission of personal vendetta to seek vengeance for his friends. Disavowed by M, Bond infiltrates Sanchez's operations and then destroys them from the inside.

Goldeneye (1995) – After a Russian satellite tracking station is destroyed by an electromagnetic pulse, Bond heads to Russia to investigate. He is stunned to find that the head of the criminal Janus syndicate behind the attack is former agent 006, and close friend Alec Trevelyn, who he believed had been killed on a mission nine years previously. Bond tracks the Janus team to Cuba where he discovers that Trevelyn plans to use a second EMP weapon to attack London. After a brutal personal fight Trevelyn is killed and Bond destroys the control station.

Tomorrow Never Dies (1997) – The secret service becomes suspicious of media mogul Elliot Carver when his newspaper's print information before they should know about it. Bond's investigations uncover that Carver is manipulating tensions in the South China Sea with the intention of sparking a war between Britain and China for media ratings. Bond and Chinese agent, Wai Lin, discover Carver's stealth ship, board it, and make it a target for both the British and Chinese fleets who destroy it.

The World Is Not Enough (1999) – When industrialist Robert King is assassinated while inside MI6 headquarters M assigns Bond to guard his daughter, Elektra who she believes is being targeted by the terrorist known as Renard. In fact it is Elektra who is guiding Renard's actions. She plans to explode a nuclear submarine in Istanbul harbor to drive the west to abandon their oil pipelines and use the King pipeline instead. Bond discovers the plan, rescues M, who King has kidnapped, and stops Renard from triggering the explosion on the submarine.

Die Another Day (2002) - Bond is captured after he is believed to have killed corrupt North Korean Colonel Moon. After being held and tortured for over a year he is suddenly released in exchange for the terrorist Zao, an associate of Moon's. Bond is believed to have been broken and is now considered compromised and useless as an agent. To prove his worth he goes after Zao and the trail leads him to rising British billionaire and media-darling Gustav Graves. It turns out that Graves is in fact Moon who has undergone a radical gene therapy to alter his appearance and mannerisms. Graves/Moon plans to use a newly developed satellite weapon to reunite Korea through force. Forcing his way on to Graves' command aircraft, Bond destroys the weapon control and kills Graves.

Casino Royale (2006) – After foiling an attempt to destroy a new airline, Bond is sent to confront the man behind the plot, Le Chiffre, known as the man who finances most of the world's terrorist activities. Their battle field is across the table at a high-stakes poker game. After Bond beats Le Chiffre he and his companion, treasury agent Vesper Lynd, are kidnapped and tortured, but Bond is rescued when a mysterious Mr. White arrives and kills Le Chiffre for playing fast and lose with his organization's funds. During his recuperation Bond falls in love with Lynd and the two set off on an extended vacation. Lynd eventually leaves clues that allow Bond to discover that she is in thrall to White's organization. She later commits suicide, and Bond finds and captures White.

Quantum of Solace (2008) – During interrogation the mysterious Mr. White boasts about the extent of his organization, Quantum, just before M's bodyguard is revealed as a member and attacks M allowing White to escape. Bond's investigations into Quantum lead him to environmental industrialist Dominic Green who is planning on backing a military coup in exchange for securing a monopoly on the water rights in Bolivia. After exposing the leading members of Quantum and destroying Greene and his plans, Bond traces and confronts the Quantum agent who lured Vesper Lynd into the organization's trap.

2012 Olympics (TV - 2012) - At the opening of the 2012 Olympic Games in London, Bond is tasked with ensuring the safe arrival of Queen Elizabeth II. After escorting The Queen from Buckingham palace, Britian's top secret agent and his sovereign parachute into the Olympic Stadium from a helicopter, floating down to the crowd beneath Union Jack parachutes.

Skyfall (2012) - After an operation in Istanbul ends in disaster, Bond is missing and presumed to be dead. In the aftermath, questions are raised over M's ability to run the Secret Service, and she becomes the subject of a government review over her handling of the situation. The Service itself is attacked, prompting Bond's return to London. His presence assists MI6's investigation in uncovering a lead, and Bond is sent to Shanghai and Macau in pursuit of a mercenary named Patrice. There, he establishes a connection to Raoul Silva, a former MI6 agent who was captured and tortured by Chinese agents. Blaming M for his imprisonment, he sets in motion a plan to ruin her reputation before murdering her. Bond saves M and attempts to lure Silva into a trap, and while he is successful in repelling Silva's assault, M is mortally wounded. Bond returns to active duty under the command of the new M, Gareth Mallory.

THE MISSIONS - The Comics

NEWSPAPER STRIPS

Casino Royale (1958) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Live And Let Die (1959) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Moonraker (1959) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Diamonds Are Forever (1959) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

From Russia With Love (1960) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Doctor No (1960) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Goldfinger (1960) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

Riscio (1961) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story

From A View To A Kill (1961) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story.

For Your Eyes Only (1961) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story.

Thunderball (1961) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

On Her Majesty's Secret Service (1964) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel

You Only Live Twice (1965) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

The Man With The Golden Gun (1966) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming novel.

The Living Daylights (1966) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story.

Octopussy (1966) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story.

The Hildebrand Rarity (1967) - Adaptation of the Ian Fleming short story.

The Spy Who Loved Me (1967) – Bond is sent to Canada to investigate a series of espionage attempts related to the development of a new jet. He uncovers a connection to SPECTRE but his lead is killed in a firefight. Heading out of Canada he travels through the USA and stops at a hotel where he encounters a Vivienne Michaels. – The rest of the strip from this point is a straight adaption of the last third of Ian Fleming's novel The Spy Who Loved Me.

The Harpies (1968) - Dr John Phineus, inventor of the Q-Ray is kidnapped by The Harpies, a gang of female villains who use hang gliders and rocket packs. Bond infiltrates the operations of Phineus's chief rival, Simon Nero, by posing as a corrupt police officer Mike Hazard and gaining employment as the new Head of Security. With the help of Nero's daughter he uncovers Nero's connections to The Harpies and rescues Phineus.

River of Death (1969) - Bond is assigned to investigate a series of bizarre murders apparently committed by trained animals. Tracing one of the animals, a howler monkey, to its place of origin, Bond ends up in Rio De Janeiro where he learns another 00 agent has been killed. All clues point to the sadistic biochemist known as Dr. Cat who has been spotted working deep in the jungle. Bond teams up with native-American CIA agent Kitty Redwing. The two are kidnapped and tortured by Dr. Cat but manage to escape and release the nerve gas that Dr. Cat was working on.

Colonel Sun (1969) - Adaptation of the Kingsley Amis continuation novel.

The Golden Ghost (1970) - Living up to the "extortion" part of their name, SPECTRE offers the British Secret Service information about a plot against the new nuclear powered airship The Golden Ghost. Their price? One million pounds and James Bond as hostage. Bond agrees and goes to Cannes to meet his SPECTRE contact. The SPECTRE agent is killed and tries to leave Bond a clue to the plot. Following various clues Bond eventually gets himself a place on the airship's maiden voyage. All the passengers are drugged and awake to find themselves and the airship held hostage on a deserted island by Felix Bruhl, another SPECTRE agent. Bruhl throws Bond to the sharks as an example, but using a concealed knife Bond escapes. Bond and Bruhl eventually face off in a brutal battle on board the airborne ship from which Bruhl falls to his death.

Fear Face (1971) - Briony Thorne, the former 0013 and Bond's former lover, returns to London where she is suspected of having been turned by the Chinese secret service. Thorne declares her innocence but the only person who believes her is Bond. She claims to have been framed by a man names Kress who has connections to Magnus Mining and someone called Lambert. Their investigations uncover that Lambert has perfected a series of faceless robots and that they plan to use them to set up a fake robbery of maps of ore strikes that Magnus' company have found, he won't profit from them and wants to sell the maps. However, one of the robots has killed a stripper, and Kress is using that as leverage to sell the plans to whichever foreign power will pay the most.

Double Jeopardy (1971) - A New York museum art director steals his own paintings, while in Paris a French industrialist steals his own company, then both die in mysterious circumstances. Meanwhile the wife of a top Ministry of Defence official is blackmailed into spying. In order to divert attention from his wife, the MoD official shoots himself. Bond is assigned to investigate the shooting and the blackmailer is revealed as an agent of SPECTRE. Bond's investigations lead him to Morocco where he uncovers SPECTRE's plans to replace certain key people with surgically altered body doubles.

Starfire (1971) - Several people who have openly criticized "Lord Astro" the leader of a hippie cult, are mysteriously killed by fireballs that seem to be called down from the skies. One of the people killed is a CIA agent, so Bond is assigned to investigate. The investigations lead him to an electronics expert named Quantrill who seems to have some connection to each victim. It turns out that Quantrill had once sold secrets to the Russians and is now a SPECTRE operative. Bond trails Quantrill to a family party and manages to lure him outside and plant one of Quantrill's own homing devices, used to summon the deadly fireballs, which are a radio controlled toy plane with a fluorescent helium balloon containing devices on top, on him.

Trouble Spot (1971) - Bond has been set on the trail of a mysterious box and impersonates an agent called Mike Channing to try and track it down. Channing's girlfriend reveals that she believes Channing's blind wife may have it. They head for California in search of Mrs. Channing, closely pursued by a Russian commissar who also wants the box. Bond decides to try and convince Folly Channing that he is her husband by imitating his voice as she was blind when she married. The only positive identification he has for Mrs. Channing is a birthmark on her backside. Luckily for Bond, Folly Channing lives in a nudist colony! After convincing Folly that he is her husband, Bond recovers the box only to be confronted by the Russian. A shoot out occurs and Bond kills the commissar. The box turns out to contain the skull of a Russian double agent as proof of his death.

Isle of the Condors (1972) - While in Italy on the trail of a Belgian woman who stole NATO secrets, Bond encounters a nude woman on horseback who claims she is escaping kidnappers. Amazingly Bond returns her to the villa where she claims she was being held prisoner and is then promptly drugged by its owners, the Gallews. Searching Bond's papers, the Gallews find a photo of the Belgian female spy. Panicked, they head for the nearby island of a man called Uccelli who runs a school for female spies. One downside to the school is that after completing a mission the girls are fed alive to Uccelli's pet condors. In the show down confrontation, Bond manages to spray Uccelli with the homing scent he uses to attract the birds, and leaves him to his fate.

League of Vampires (1972) - A vampire cult that is growing across Europe seems to be linked to a series of mysterious deaths, including one of an MI6 agent. MI6 are alerted by shipping magnate Xerxes Xerophanos that his wife may be in the process of being recruited by the vampire cult. Bond infiltrates a cult ceremony where Margo Xerophanos is to be the victim. Bond deciphers that Xerxes is behind the cult and is trying to get her killed so he can inherit her fortune. He also plans to kill off her father using a tactical nuclear missile launched from one of his ships. Bond manages to persuade the crew to mutiny, foiling the plan.

Die With My Boots On (1973) - The Mafia are after a new British developed sedative that has been found to have psychedelic properties and is growing in use as a recreational drug. It also leaves the user impervious to pain. Bond is sent to New York to find the niece of the drug's inventor and keep the Mafia from getting hold of her.

The Girl Machine (1973) - Britain wishes to install the Emir of Hajar on the throne and overthrow his uncle in order to secure oil rights. However the Secret Service must first find out where the Emir is being held. Clues lead Bond to a man called Rashid in Las Palmas, but he is killed before 007 can get information from him. Bond then tries Rashid's sister who turns out to be one of the wives of the regent holding the Emir. Bond is smuggled into Hajar in the titular, girl machine, a large cabinet filled with scents, alcohol and blue movies that was meant to be a bribe for the regent. Bond eventually contacts Rashid's sister, rescues the Emir and the three flee for the border.

Beware of Butterflies (1973) - Bond and new 00 agent Suzi Kew are assigned to kill an agent of the Butterfly spy network in Paris, which they do. On leave in Jamaica afterwards, Bond is kidnapped and brain washed. Suzi Kew is assigned to go after Bond and finds him amnesiac in Jamaica. His memory restored by the Secret Service, he infiltrates the Butterfly network and kills Attila, the head of the network.

Nevsky Nude (1974) - MI6 receive a tip off about something called “Operation Nevsky.” Following the lead Bond arrives in Sussex where he is surprised by a nude woman descending in a parachute. The woman and a Russian agent are killed in an exchange of gun fire. Shortly afterwards a renegade aristocrat claims to broadcast a message from King Arthur and ghostly knights are seen in Cornwall. It all turns out to be a SMERSH backed plot to kidnap the Secretary of State for Defence and hustle him away via submarine.

The Phoenix Project (1974) - The Phoenix Project is a new suit of armor that will render the wearer impenetrable to bullets, grenades or fire. During a test it goes wrong and the wearer is killed. Investigations lead Bond to Istanbul and an arms dealer named Kazim. Bond manages to work his way into Kazim’s inner circle before his cover is blown and he has to escape using a fully functioning version of The Phoenix Project armor.

The Black Ruby Caper (1975) - Bond is sent after a bomber called Herr Rubin, aka Mr. Ruby, and tricks Ruby into believing that his girlfriend is helping Bond. Ruby escapes and resurfaces in Ghana where he has recruited a sculptor named Roscoe Carver, who had once been hunted by the FBI, to build a hollow statue in which Ruby can plant another bomb. Carver’s daughter and a beautiful model team up to help Bond by luring Ruby into a trap where Bond kills him by pouring molten metal over him.

Till Death Do Us Part (1975) - Bond is sent out to seduce Ardra Petrich the daughter of an ex MI6 agent in Eastern Europe, with the intention of getting her to return to Britain. Her married lover also believes that she knows her father’s secrets and offers to sell her to the KGB.

Torch Time Affair (1975) - Bond is sent to locate agent Tim Hurst who is meant to be in possession of Torch-Time, a document time tabling various subversive acts. The trail leads to a deserted beach in Acapulco where, instead of Hurst, he finds a woman buried in the sand up to her neck. Bond rescues the woman, Carmen Perez, who says she was lured to the beach by a known SMERSH agent. Hurst’s body turns up in Mexico City along with an empty tape recorder. Various clues lead Bond to realize that Carmen is an enemy agent also after the tape.

Hot Shot (1976) - Bond teams up with Fatima Khalid, a Palestinian freedom fighter, to investigate the Elbis terrorist group who appear to be responsible for several aircraft midair explosions. The Elbis group is lead by a man known only as Huliraya. Huliraya means King Tiger and a string of tiger themed deaths lead Bond and Fatima to uncover the truth – Huliraya is in fact Dr. Julius No! Dr. No plans to use a giant parabolic mirror that can focus the sun’s rays to destroy a plane carrying the US Secretary of State. The ray-gun is mounted on board a super tanker, but Bond gets on board and destroys the tanker before the weapon can be fired.

Nightbird (1976) - An old girl friend of Bond's is apparently kidnapped by "Martians" and killed before a ransom can be paid. As Bond investigates, one of his informants is killed and several other people are abducted by the strange looking creatures. Bond eventually traces the various clues to film producer Ferdinand Polgar. Bond befriends Polgar's girl friend who leads him to the producer's villa on Sardinia where the kidnap victims are being held Ape of Diamonds (1976) - The Secret Service are sent a film showing a gorilla attacking a woman accompanied by an "Ape of Diamonds" playing card. Another ape kidnaps an Arab dignitary in London and Bond is assigned to find out what's going on. The woman in the film is identified and Bond travels to Egypt to ask questions at the game park where she worked. Here he meets the woman's sister who admits she uses trained gorillas to assassinate people, and Bond offers her a job!!

When The Wizard Wakes (1977) - Bond is sent to confirm that a Hungarian traitor died many years before. When the grave is opened Bond is surprised to see the body move just before a bomb destroys the grave site. It transpires that the Mafia is trying to convince the Hungarian government that the traitor is still alive and has smuggled the Crown of St. Stephen out of Hungary. The truth is that the real Crown is being held by the CIA in Fort Knox, but the CIA can't tell the Hungarians because SPECTRE has threatened to release a list of CIA agents in Hungary to the Russians if they do.

Sea Dragon (1977) - When oil magnate Sir Ivor Morlock is murdered in an explosion on his private boat in the Bahamas, Bond escapes with his life, but only just. The mystery deepens when a second member of Morlock's oil consortium is killed by a sea dragon!

Death Wing (1977) - Bond catches a female spy trying to interfere with a Royal Air Force test. His investigations lead him to Matteo Mortellito, an aerospace engineer who has created the Deathwing flying sleds. Bond manages to work his way into Mortellito's organization aiming to prevent the sleds from being put to use.

The Xanadu Connection (1977) - Bond is sent into East Germany to extract undercover MI6 agent Heidi Franz. Franz's tells MI6 about a plan to capture a Russian dissident and MI6 informer known only as Marco Polo. The plot is somehow linked to the mysterious performer and his shadowy Xanadu organization.

Sharkbait (1977) - Bond and KGB agent Katya Orlova team up to stop a renegade Red Navy officer and his pilots.

Doomcrack (1981) - The Doomcrack is a sonic weapon with the ability to topple buildings. Bond is initially assigned to bring it back to Britain, but it is stolen and various international landmarks are threatened. Bond believes that SPECTRE is back in action. Bond is set up to look like he has been stealing secrets from MI6 so he can appear to have “turned.” He eventually works his way on to SPECTRE’s submarine base where he eventually meets Madame Spectra. Bond uses a new improved version of the Doomcrack weapon to destroy the submarine and escape.

The Paradise Plot (1982) - Two industrialists appear to be visited by their dead children and all the clues lead to a cult leader known as Father Star. Bond follows the trail to Star’s “Project Polestar” based on a Caribbean island, and using the “I’ve been kicked out of MI6” ploy once again is accepted into the villain’s organization. Bond learns that Star uses a nuclear powered airship to attack his enemies, has managed to gain control of a US spy plane by brain washing its pilot, and is building a private army!

Deathmask (1982) - A series of mysterious deaths are linked to a fast acting virus that leaves the face swollen, and one of the corpses is found holding a Greek deathmask. The trail of clues leads Bond to Crete where he finds a secret cavern marked with the deathmask. The cavern blows up before he can investigate further. The deathmask is connected to the industrialist Ivor Nyborg. Nyborg has genetically engineered the new virus which he intends to spread around the world using his robotic plane, the Global Ghost, but Bond manages to gain control of the plane and crash it into Nyborg’s headquarters.

Flittermouse (1983) - Two people who try and sell the same intelligence report to MI6 are murdered using vampire bats. Amazingly, Bond manages to deduce from this that Dr. Cat (from River of Death) has returned. Bond and Suzie Kew fall into an ambush at Dr. Cat’s headquarters. Cat orders the captured Bond to strip but Bond manages to shoot him with a gun concealed in the medallion he is wearing around his neck!

Polestar (1983) - Strange deaths and mysterious missile interceptions lead Bond to the North Pole and the Polestar scientific outpost. Bond infiltrates the post by posing as a renegade rocket engineer, but has to break cover when his companion is threatened.

Snake Goddess (1983) - A giant snake attacks Moneypenny and a village in Cornwall. Bond’s investigations lead him to a girl called Freya who claims to be a reincarnation of the Norse goddess. Freya is in fact being controlled by a villain named Vidyala who plans to use his giant snake to attack the British Navy.

COMIC BOOKS

Doctor No (1962) - Movie Adaptation

For Your Eyes Only (1981) - Movie Adaptation

Octopussy (1983) - Movie Adaptation

Licence to Kill (1989) - Movie Adaptation

Permission To Die (1989) - Erik Widziadlo, a wealthy scientist living in the USA has offered the British Secret Service the plans to a new cheap system for launching payloads into space. The price: Rescuing his niece from Eastern block Hungary.

This mission falls to James Bond. Traveling to Hungary, Bond teams up with a band of gypsies, one of whom is Kerim Bey's daughter, but can Bond and the gypsies manage to rescue Widziadlo's niece when she is guarded by a whole army?

Serpents Tooth (1992) - Flying Saucers kidnap a native woman in Peru, a scientist is kidnapped in London and a British nuclear sub is attacked while under the arctic ice sheet. 009 is sent to investigate and ends up in Peru where he is killed. Bond is assigned to finish 009's work and recover the missing nuclear missiles from the submarine. All clues seem to lead to a man called Indigo who, due to the results of genetic experimentation, looks like a human lizard. He is planning on using the missiles to flood the world and create an Eden in which he will rule, the scientists have recreated dinosaurs and Dodo's. Bond stops him.

Silent Armageddon (1993) - The US Department of Defense computers have been hacked by a system called Omega and had their missile targets altered. Omega is the ultimate computer hacking program and can penetrate any security system. Omega's creators discover that a new artificial intelligence project is being developed that could put an end to Omega. They turn to the criminal organization known as Cerberus for protection. Cerberus attacked the labs where the AI is being developed leaving a teenage girl math genius as the sole survivor. Bond must convince the young teenager to reveal what she knows about the AI project while protecting her from a Cerberus strike team lead by Erik Klebb, the son of Bond's nemesis in From Russia With Love, Rosa Klebb.

Light Of My Death (1993) - A Secret Service agent is killed while conducting a clandestine meeting on board a cable car in the French Alps. Bond is sent to find the killer and is reunited with new Secret Service employee Tatiana Romanova. The trail leads from France to Hong Kong and finally to Egypt where they come to face with the assassin.

Minute of Midnight (1994) - A wealthy villain called Lexis has organized a meeting of various terrorist leaders in Washington DC, but unknown to them the meeting has been secretly taped by a homeless bum. The homeless guy is later attacked by a street gang but manages to easily beat them off. The "bum" is, of course, James Bond. On his flight back to the UK, he is gassed and thrown out of the plane but manages to survive and return home intact. On his return M orders Bond to assassinate Lexis.

Shattered Helix (1994) - Bond and a detachment of US Marines fail to stop an attack by the criminal organization Cerberus on a bio-dome known as The Ark in Arizona. The aim of the attack was so that Cerberus could kidnap Dr. Philip Boyce, the sole survivor of a secret CIA laboratory located in Antarctica. The laboratory had produced a lethal mutagen that had killed the rest of the scientists working on it. Cerberus need Boyce to find the lab and recover the mutagen for their own plans. Bond and his team of Marines head for Antarctica to stop them.

Quasimodo Gambit (1995) - In Jamacia, Bond gets mixed up in the plans of an ex-mercenary turned religious fanatic and a gang of gun runners.

Goldeneye (1996) - Movie Adaptation